Our History & Goals

Since 2002, with the start of the Maine Learning Technology Initiative (MLTI), Maine has been viewed as a community of educational leaders, as we implement the first successful one-to-one digital learning program. Schools administrators from around the globe have visited Maine for "study tours" to visit exemplary one-to-one digital learning schools.

Our conference's goal is to review theory and practice in the study of mathematics, and define the next steps for change. We will discuss the critical importance of leadership in school culture, as well as conduct visits to a few exemplary school programs. By observing and learning from the teachers and students in action, we aim to provide direct stories of inspiration to fuel our work together, by asking the question "How do we change the teaching and learning of math in our own schools, countries, and communities?"

We look forward to welcoming you to Maine! If you have any questions about your Maine visit, please contact Amy Wilmot at awilmot@micdl.org.
